

Pet Health Network

or

Why Should You...

Male cats that are neutered can't get testicular cancer, and they live 40% longer than their unneutered counterparts. Unneutered male cats respond to the "call of the wild" and their desire to wander is fierce. Unneutered male cats may become aggressive toward other cats, increasing their risk of injury and becoming infected with feline leukemia and/or feline immunodeficiency virus. And don't forget: unneutered male cats tend to spray urine, which stinks!

Female cats that are spayed can't get uterine cancers; their risk of mammary (breast) cancer is reduced by 25%; and they are less prone to urinary tract infections and hormonal changes.

Your Cat